Welcoming the weary, dedicated to discipleship

"Come to me, all you who are weary and burdened, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you and learn from me, for I am gentle and humble in heart, and you will find rest for your souls." (Matthew 11:28-29)

Dear brothers and sisters,

I remember vividly the day that I first understood just what happens in the process of childbirth. I am sure I was a very naïve little girl, blissfully ignorant of so many painful facts of human life, so it came as a shock to me to overhear some of the details of the birth process as my Mom talked to a friend on the phone after the birth of my little brother. To me, childbirth simply involved a few months of excitement and anticipation and the brief absence of my mother, followed by her return home with a tiny, clean, warm bundle of baby. In my innocence I had really never inquired further than that happy and comfortable sequence of events...until the day of my eavesdropping on this conversation that led to many anxious and scary questions.

What I recall most clearly from this very serious conversation is that my Mom told me this: that no matter how painful labor and childbirth might be, it is all forgotten in the joy of seeing the new little person that has come into the world. Knowing my mother well, I am sure that she spoke from her heart; she wasn't just 'sugar-coating' reality for the comfort of her anxious little daughter. Given the chance, I know that my Mom, who lost many babies early in her pregnancies, would have happily given birth to many more than the three children she was able to have. As for the babies that she was able to carry to full term – myself, my older sister and younger brother – every bit of pain and discomfort that those births entailed was an act of love and a source of the greatest joy for her.

TO:

The readings of the Daily Office these days have been bringing us through the Passion and Death of our Lord. They are not easy reading, not fun, not pretty or poetic. The details of the Passion are every bit – in fact, far more – alarmingly brutal and disturbingly graphic than the physical reality of childbirth. The gospel writers do not spare us the harsh realities of cruelty and blood and sweat and pain. They walk us through the hours of those dark days, side by side with Jesus, allowing us to feel the sting of the whip and the bite of betrayal – and the fear of separation from God in those final moments of his earthly life. It is almost unbearable sometimes to allow the words to sink into our hearts, as we do most intentionally when we make the Stations of the Cross during Lent.

But what transforms the horror of the Passion into beauty for us is this: that although the suffering and shame of Jesus Christ were inflicted by the cruelty and ignorance of human beings, the truth is that our Lord walked every step of his Passion by choice, out of his passionate and unending love for us. And the truth is that the outcome, for Jesus as well as for us, of all the horror of the Crucifixion was the glorious joy of new life. I can imagine, at the risk of being a little presumptuous perhaps, that Jesus might tell us what my Mom told me: that all the pain and suffering were forgotten, blotted out, in his overwhelming joy as he walked forth from the empty tomb.

My mother passed away a few years ago. But I am still so richly blessed by the love she poured out on me for as long as she lived, and not least for the power of her love that overwhelmed the pain and suffering it took to bring me into the world, and transformed it into joy. And if we are able to comprehend it with our childish hearts and minds, that kind of mother-love is a small type of the divine love that the Father revealed to us in the Passion and Death of the Son: love so powerful that even the very worst evil that the world could inflict on him in the weakness of his humanity was eclipsed, blotted out, in the overwhelming joy of the new life he came to bestow on us, his beloved children.

Blessed be He!

Love to you all in the name of the Father and the Son and the Holy Spirit,

Kathryn+

Some Family History

Irenaeus was born about 125 a.d. to a Christian family in Smyrna. Polycarp, who had been taught by John, was his bishop and first teacher. As a young man Irenaeus went to Rome and studied under Justin Martyr. By the time he was 35 he was a priest in Lyon, in France. The next twenty years was a time of persecution; many clergy were imprisoned. Irenaeus was not harmed but in Rome Justin was killed. In 177 the church in Lyon sent him to Rome to ask advice from the Pope, and while he was there, the Christians in Lyon were massacred. When he returned, Irenaeus became the second bishop to those who had survived. After 180 a.d. the persecution subsided and Irenaeus could concentrate on being a pastor, a missionary, and a writer. He died about 200 a.d., some say as a martyr though we have no account of it.

The most famous of his writings was Against Heresies. In his region there were many followers of Magus the Magician, one of many gnostic teachers. The gnosis did not care about being true to Scripture or to Christian tradition. In answer, Irenaeus emphasized Scripture as the standard for Christian teaching and gave the earliest list of the books of the New Testament. He emphasized preserving the traditions that were handed down in direct line from Jesus, as he had received them from Jesus to John to Polycarp. He emphasized an early version of "The Apostles' Creed" as a summary of Christian belief.

Some early Christian communities tended to focus on a single gospel as their favorite and neglect the other three. Irenaeus argued that the four gospels were intended to work together to give a full perspective on their one message. The original meaning of the word "catholic" was someone who used all four gospels rather than only one.

The Gnostics taught that the material world was created by an evil spirit to entrap us, and that salvation meant escaping from material existence. Irenaeus taught that Jesus came to redeem the body, not free us from it. He taught that Jesus would have come in the flesh even if we had not sinned, and that atonement for sin was accomplished by Jesus' birth (rather than His crucifixion). Irenaeus was the first to write about end times prophecies, and his ideas became standard interpretation even to the present day.

-Carroll

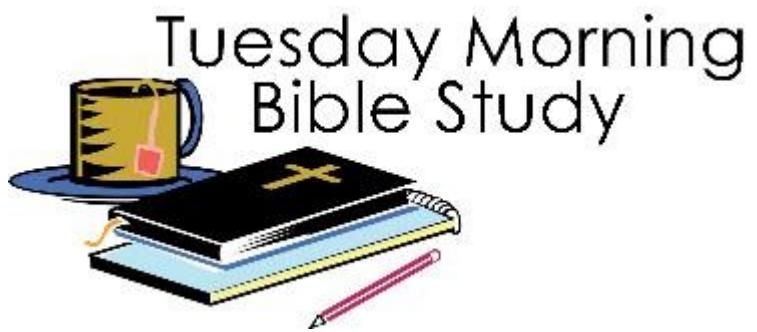

As so many young people in our community begin their new school year, let's be in prayer for them all, and also for those parents, teachers, and others who work to help them grow up to full and responsible adulthood. The following are prayers from the Book of Common Prayer that you might find helpful:

A Prayer for Schools and Colleges

O Eternal God, bless all schools, colleges, and universities, and especially Norwood/Norfolk Central Schools, Potsdam Central Schools, SUNY Potsdam, Clarkson University, and all other institutions in which our young people are learning and growing, that they may be lively centers for sound learning, new discovery, and the pursuit of wisdom; and grant that those who teach and those who learn may find you to be the source of all truth; through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

A Prayer for Young People

God our Father, you see your children growing up in an unsteady and confusing world: Show them that your ways give more life than the ways of the world, and that following you is better than chasing after selfish goals. Help them to take failure, not as a measure of their worth, but as a chance for a new start. Give them strength to hold their faith in you, and to keep alive their joy in your creation; through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

Tuesday Morning Bible Study

Tuesday morning Bible study embarks on a new venture!

Paul's letter to the ROMANS

On September 22nd, God willing, the Tuesday morning Bible study will finish our study of the letter of Paul to the Galatian church. It has been a rich and rewarding study, both because Paul's letter has so much to teach us about grace and freedom and the way God works with his people, yesterday, today, and forever – but also because of the excellent conversations that make our study richer and more personal. "Iron sharpens iron" and our fellowship with one another is a blessing to us all.

Though there is no end to the wisdom we might gain from the study of Galatians, we are ready now to begin a new study. We have chosen another of Paul's letters: this time a longer, more theologically-packed one – his letter to the Romans. Our first Romans study will be September 29th. It's going to be great!

If you are interested in joining us, I'll be ordering books in the next week or so, and I'd be happy to order an extra copy for you. Or, if you'd like to study with us but don't want a book that's also fine – the only text you really need is your Bible.

What Wondrous Love Is This

American Folk Hymn

What wondrous love is this, O my soul, O my soul!

What wondrous love is this, O my soul!

What wondrous love is this

That caused the Lord of bliss

To bear the dreadful curse for my soul, for my soul,

To bear the dreadful curse for my soul!

When I was sinking down, sinking down, sinking down,

When I was sinking down, sinking down,

When I was sinking down

Beneath God's righteous frown,

Christ laid aside His crown for my soul for my soul,

Christ laid aside His crown for my soul.

To God and to the Lamb I will sing, I will sing;

To God and to the Lamb I will sing;

To God and to the Lamb,

Who is the great I AM,

While millions join the theme, I will sing, I will sing,

While millions join the theme, I will sing.

And when from death I'm free, I'll sing on, I'll sing on;

And when from death I'm free, I'll sing on.

And when from death I'm free

I'll sing His love for me,

And through eternity I'll sing on, I'll sing on,

And through eternity I'll sing on.
